

There He is! My new financial manager, after I said goodbye to Clauneck. No one other than the Archangel Sandalphon, the ruler of Malkuth (Earth in the Kabbalah). I was a bit lost after issues with Clauneck (no offense to Him), and after deliberating for a while and discussing the matter with my patron, He called Sandalphon and His words were "I'll take good care of you". I asked Him a few questions too regarding his background, and He told me as follows:

"He rules no heaven, but has access to all of them; Michael rules 7th; he also has fertility towards women as speciality, was the prophet Elijah, but God turned Him into what he is now. He can also teach how to manifest things physically, but not his forte. Delivers prayers to God, and is therefore swift in performance. His name is a reference to sandalmaker"

The information listed below is also correct as confirmed by Him, taken from the book "A dictionary of Angels", by Gustav Davidson.

Samsaveel [Samsapeel]

Samuil (Semil, "heard of God")—in Jewish legendary lore, an angel of the earth—that is, one who exercises dominion over the earth. In Enoch II, 33, he is the angel who not only transported Enoch to Heaven (while Enoch was still in the flesh) but, as commanded by God, returned him to earth—although this mission and feat are also ascribed to other angels, among them Rasul and Anafiel.

Samyaza [Semyyaza]

Sanaiel—in Mandaean angelology, a spirit who stands at the gate of life and prays for souls. [Rf. Drower, The Canonical Prayerbook of the Mandaeans.]

Sanctities—a term for one of the celestial orders, as employed by Milton in Paradise Lost III, 60. [Rf. West, Milton and his Angels, p. 135.]

Sandalphon (Sandalphon, Sandolphon—Greek, "co-brother")—originally the prophet Elian (Elijah). In rabbinic lore, Sandalphon is one of the great serim (angelic princes), twin brother of Metatron, master (hazzan) of heavenly song. Exceeding Hadraniel in height by a 500-year foot journey, he is regarded as one of the tallest hierarchs in the celestial realms—Moses, sighting him in the 3rd Heaven, called him "the tall angel." Talmud Hagigot 13b says his head reaches Heaven (which was said also of Irafel and of the Greek giant Typhon). In Mathers, The Greater Key of Solomon, Sandalphon is designated "the left-hand feminine cherub of the ark." In the liturgy for the Feast of Tabernacles, he is credited with gathering the prayers of the faithful, making a garland of such prayers, and then "adjuring them to ascend as an orb to the supreme King of Kings." In 3 Enoch, Sandalphon is described as ruler of the 6th Heaven (makom) but, in The Zohar (Exodus 202b), he is "chief of the 7th Heaven." According to Islamic lore, he dwells in the 4th Heaven. As is reported of Michael, he carries on ceaseless combat with the apparently indestructible Samael (Satan), prince of evil. In popular etymology, Sandalphon is a fancier of sandals (soft shoes) when he stands in the presence of his Maker, but leather shoegear when he appears before the Shekinah (see The Zohar). The ancient sages identified Sandalphon with Ophan (q.v.). He is said also, by cabalists, to be instrumental in bringing about the differentiation of sex in the embryo—a good thing to bring to the attention of expectant mothers. [Rf. Yalkut Rambam.] In Longfellow's "Sandalphon," he is the "Angel of Glory, Angel of Prayer," Longfellow's inspiration for the poem deriving from J. P. Stehelin, Traditions of the Jews.

Samael, keeper of prayers of fertility [257]

Sandolphon [Sandalphon]

Sangariab—angel of facts, whose chief office is accusing those who fail to observe the Sabbath. [Rf. The Zohar (Exodus 207a).]

Sangariel—an angel who guards the portals of Heaven. [Rf. Mathers, The Greater Key of Solomon.]

Sanigron Kumya—in M. Gaster, The Sword of Moses, one of the 14 great angels who may be invoked in special ceremonial rites.

Sannul (Sanul)—an angel of the order of powers; in occultism, he is summoned up in ritual magic rites. [Rf. The Sixth and Seventh Books of Moses.]

Sansanni (Samsarvi, Sanvi, Sansennoi, Snvi, Sannanoy)—one of the 3 angels credited with bringing Lilith back to Adam after their separation (in the pre-five days). The other 2 angels who assisted in the reconciliation were Sanuy (or Sennoi) and Samangaluf. Sansanni is now a potent prophylactic against the deprivations of Lilith and her minions. [Rf. Trachtenberg, Jewish Magic and Superstition.]

Santanael—a Friday angel, resident of the 3rd Heaven. Summoned up, Santanael will appear only when the invocant faces south. [Rf. de Abano, The Heptameron; Barrett, The Magus II.]

Santriel—the sole reference to Santriel occurs in The Zohar (Exodus 151a), where his function is

Work with Him started in Februari 2017 and He was the one that lead me to become a magician for hire and open up my webshop; I was against the idea due to the target audience or group not being the most profitable (so loosely put, that most people that seek out the occult are broke losers), but He persisted and was like "Just do it, you'll see". It's been little about over half a year now and I went through several minor changes, like business boosting and so on- I'm the one bringing customers in, managed & influenced by Him through my own skill, NOT sitting back and not doing anything after all. I have invested quite a lot in Him too (e.g. gemstones, silver etc), but more than worth it to say the least. See results as per today, December 27th, 2017 below in USD.

The average person in my location makes $200 a month; I make THIS, with much more coming. I moved from a one bedroom apt. to a 3 bedroom upper house, upper class with 2 bathrooms as an example and can afford to buy a new car every 4 months or so.
